THE LAST WORD

An ancient document says, "Those who are contemptuous of cultured people have no way to win people's hearts completely; those who are contemptuous of common people have no way to get people to work as hard as they can."

For military operations it is essential to strive to win the hearts of heroes, to make the rules of rewards and punishments strict, to include both cultural and martial arts, and to combine both hard and soft techniques.

Do not count on your strength and take an opponent lightly. Do not be conceited about your abilities and think little of subordinates. Do not let personal favor congeal into authority. Plan before acting. Fight only when you know you can win. --Zhuge Liang, Records of the Loyal Lord of Warriors.
